Sales Goal	Pay for choir trip

Taylor Tavares was determined. Her dream was to travel to Chicago for a choir performance. But the reality was the trip was expensive and she thought there was no way to go.

When she learned about RightResponse, Taylor discovered her dream could come true.

She signed up as an individual fundraiser and immediately began to sell. In the first weekend alone, she sold $980 worth of first aid kits.

As Christmas season approached, Taylor promoted the kits as great gift ideas and pushed her sales higher. Within a few months, Taylor had sold more than $4,000 in first aid kits, meeting her goal of raising $2,075 for her trip. Her mom, Lisa, was impressed with Taylor – and with RightResponse.

“This fundraiser is the only reason Taylor can go on her trip,” said Lisa.

Both Taylor and her mom are encouraging other groups in the community to use RightResponse.

“And with Refer-a-Friend, I can make even more,” Taylor added.

“First aid kits are so easy to sell because everyone needs one!”
